Latest from Samoa.

King Mafetua Returns Again to Apia.

ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED.

His People Turn Out in Mass to Meet Him, and Then the Present Ruler, Mafetua, Greets Him Soon After His Arrival—A Banquet Tendered the Two Kings.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3. Advice from Apia describes the return of King Mafetua as follows: "The German gunboat Wolf arrived in the harbor in the afternoon of Aug. 10. When the vessel came to anchor Mafetua was seen standing on the deck. The flag of the returning monarch was at once hoisted on shore, and hearty cheers were given by the American and English residents. Mafetua, who was exiled with him were also on the Wolf. No canoe was allowed to approach the vessel, but about dark the king and chiefs were taken ashore in one of the Wolf's boats with Dr. Stuebel, German consul general, and Falea, chief magistrate of Samoa, who had gone aboard the Wolf an hour before.

Quite a crowd of natives and a few white residents had assembled at the spot where the landing was made. When the boat touched the beach, Dr. Stuebel sprang out and assisted Mafetua to land once more upon his native shore. The king was taken at once to Falea's house, where he was followed by a number of people. The meeting between Mafetua and his relatives was most affecting. The women fell on their knees and kissed his hands and feet, while the king, who had been exiled for years, wept bitterly. He was accompanied by his wife and children, and all present extended sympathy to the monarch who had been exiled for years.

All of the returned party gave the highest praise to Dr. Morgan, the United States consul at Marshall Islands, and declared that had it not been for his assistance they would have suffered heavily. About an hour after Mafetua had arrived at the house, Mafetua, who had been exiled during his absence, arrived and greeted his relatives most cordially. Mafetua seemed to be a contented man and broken down in health. The white residents present drank to the health of the two monarchs, and an invitation was then given to attend an impromptu banquet. The good will which existed between the two kings.

THE RACE WAR.

Everything quiet and no further outbreak anticipated.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 3. A Jackson, Miss., special to The Press says that Governor Lowry has received from Greenwood by special train. Before he left Greenwood he prevailed upon the armed whites who had assembled there to return to their homes. Instead of carrying out the intention of going to the scene of the threatened race war, the three military companies, which left Greenwood at midnight Sunday night, by boat had not been heard from.

It is not thought now that a conflict will take place, as it should happen before the troops arrive. A private dispatch from Greenwood just received at Jackson, reported everything quiet with the troops still up the river. The governor has not yet been able to see Cromwell, the negro leader who arrived in Jackson last night, although he has been trying to do so.

The wind was increasing, and the roar could be heard for two miles. The Black Pine mill and mine were shut down, and all the men turned out to fight the fires. The Strike Still On.

And the Situation Unchanged in London.

GENERAL ORDER WITHDRAWN.

The Dock Laborers Remain Firm and Determined to Stay Out Until Their Demands are Granted—Some of the Strikers Becoming Discontented—Other Dispatches from Abroad.

LONDON, Sept. 3. The great strike is still in force, and the situation of affairs may be said to be unchanged. Neither side has made a move yet, and it is not given to say now what the day may bring forth. There are signs of grumbling among the strikers over the division of the relief funds. The stove-doves complain that they are not receiving their proper share of the funds. But the men generally stand firm, and there is nothing like serious dissension in the ranks. Three thousand tailors struck yesterday morning. The strike leaders issued a manifesto yesterday, in which the general strike order was withdrawn, and in which the statement was made that the strikers will accept no compromise and will have no further intercourse with the dock directors until the latter send word that they are ready to capitulate.

The leaders of the strike are dissatisfied with some of the speeches that have been made by men who have volunteered assistance. The dock companies express themselves as better satisfied with the aspect of affairs. They have an increased number of men at work, composed of strikers who have given up the fight and new men. The officials of the companies state that plenty of labor would be obtained if strikers' pickets were abolished. It is asserted that there is a split among the strikers, and that a small committee has been appointed looking to the abandonment of the strike.

The Rochester coal whippers and bargemen visited a large number of vessels in the River Mersey and forcibly compelled the men at work thereon to cease operations. A deputation representing eighty of the leading ship owners of London called upon the managers of the dock companies and urged them to permit vessel owners to make their own arrangements with men to land and discharge their ships, pending a settlement of the existing trouble. Charles Morgan Norwood, the chairman of the dock companies, replied to the deputation and urged them not to press their request, as it involved concessions to the strikers against which the companies were fighting.

Mr. Norwood reminded them that it was in the interest of all shippers, as well as in their own, that the companies had taken the determined stand they now hold, and he was convinced that the whole commercial community and the laborers themselves were interested in the principle should be maintained inviolate at any cost, that prices for wages as well as for commodities should be fixed by free competition in the open market, and not by an oligarchy of conspirators sitting in secret and formulating their demands upon a consideration of one side of the question and only one.

CONVICTION TO OBITERATION. CONN., Sept. 3. Mr. William O'Brien, member of parliament for Cork, who last week was sentenced to two months' imprisonment under conviction of having held a Nationalist meeting, which had been proclaimed, was removed from the jail here today and taken to Galway to serve out his sentence. BURNED AT THE STAKE.

The Horrible Vengeance of a Kentucky Mob Near Monticello.

SOMERSET, Ky., Sept. 3. Mr. William Otis, an influential and wealthy farmer, residing a few miles from Monticello, Ky., has two young daughters, aged 13 and 14 years. He has had a negro boy employed on his farm for some time. On Saturday evening the older people left home on a visit and left the two young ladies in charge of the house. During their absence the negro entered the house, and after looking the elder of the two in a room outraged the other.

The older sister escaped to a neighbor's house, and gave the alarm, when a posse of men gathered and started in pursuit of the brute. He was found hiding in the woods, and, as the pursuing party carried with them the proper utensils, judgment was quickly executed.

He was tied to a stake driven in the ground, and a rail pen was built around him. Both the negro and pen were well saturated with coal oil and a match touched to them. In a few minutes nothing remained but a small pile of burning flesh. The negro's cries were terrible to hear, but there was not a sympathizing being in the crowd. The young lady is in a precarious condition.

A TRAGEDY IN KENTUCKY. WATKINS, Ky., Sept. 3. Saturday evening a picnic was enjoyed by roughly from what is called the Greek district. Stimulated by whiskey they broke up the picnic, organized a row, and succeeded in killing one J. W. Vance, an inspector of the Louisville and Nashville road. It is alleged that the fatal shot was fired by one Philip Stapleton, whose friends say he was first shot at and his brother wounded by Vance. A boy named Orrin Stapleton, standing behind Philip Stapleton, was ordered in the right hand and left forearm. All the parties were in liquor, obtained outside of Walton, it is said, which is a local option town. Vance, though in liquor, appears to have been defending the picnicers, and trying to prevent the roughs from putting out the lights with their belligerent whips. The bodies and possible element had become alarmed and left before the tragedy occurred.

We are quite satisfied in street cleaning, and if we were only as well up in paving we should be happy. We will wake up some of these days in this respect.

The campaign is on. Since Campbell's nomination cross-firing with him has begun, and that is always a sure indication that the political campaign is on.

Since the Columbus ball club defeated the champion St. Louis Browns three successive games, the Capital City wants the World's fair located there. A base ball triumph leads to sudden greatness.

Delaware has a new directory on which the Gazette finds a basis for an estimate for over 12,000 population. This is pretty good, but Marion has a liar on whose statements we might estimate Marion's population at 20,000.

It is announced that Amelia River-Chandler has abandoned literature. Can it be that Amelia's literary career is already "dead" after such "quick" growth, or has she gone out to slide down the straw stacks again to recuperate and live anew?

We do not mean to begin the local political tussle that is likely to occur next year, but we can surmise a coming event by the falsehood being circulated that Mr. Davis was a candidate before the Mt. Pleasant convention in 1888. The story is false in every particular and is being told now with a purpose easily guessed. Mr. Davis is out of the city and the Star volunteers to deny this misrepresentation which is calculated to do him dirt. He is no announced candidate for anything, so there is no call for any falsehoods about him. His name has never been before any congressional convention. Three delegates from Marion county refused to vote for McNeal and may have voted once or twice for Davis, but he was no candidate and their votes were bestowed unsolicited.

John Gartram has gone to Chicago to see the sights in the great Windy City.

Miss Carrie Turner is visiting friends at Columbus and attending the state fair.

E. C. Nebergall is now appearing as night yard clerk at the C. R. V. and T. He has had considerable experience in the railroad business and will no doubt meet with much deserved success in his new position.

Phil Joy was locked up today, by Marshal Gold, on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Phil's is a bad case of snakes, he having indulged in intoxicants until reptiles of various descriptions haunt him constantly. When arrested he was creating a disturbance at his home on Railroad street, and he was locked up for safe keeping.

The Baltimore Herald says: "The dramatization of Jules Verne's famous story, 'Around the World in Eighty Days,' has lost its novelty, but it has evidently gained steadily in popularity, and its presentation at Harris' Academy of Music last night was before an audience as large as any this season. The production was worthy of the reception given it. The scenery and stage effects were appropriate and realistic; the ballet was good and the auxiliaries were prettily costumed and well drilled, and the numerous tableaux were effective." — at Music Hall, Wednesday night.

High Life Coffee. Knowing the constant demand for the highest, purest and finest coffee obtainable we have appointed Messrs. Coffey & Stone agents for the sale of our coffees, which have a national reputation for purity, strength and flavor.

Our high life Mocha and Java is a combination of the highest grade of Aden Mocha and selected private mark Java, being always packed in light tight cans it retains the aroma and strength lost from coffees exposed to the weather. After trying all other brands you will settle down upon high life as the perfection of drink, as all connoisseurs of coffee have done from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Beware of Imitations. WINSLOW, RAND & WATSON, Coffee Importers, Boston, Mass. Coffey & Stone exclusive agents for Marion, Ohio.

A Derrick Falls. An exhibition of much carelessness on the part of a number of men employed at the C. & A. junction, in putting up a new target pole, was witnessed today. A derrick had been erected for this purpose but the guy ropes for its support were placed in such a manner that one rope was caught by the south bound passenger train, on the C. & T., and the derrick was drawn from its position and thrown about fifty feet. A man named John Dinele was struck by a flying piece of wood and suffered a painful cut in his head and was otherwise badly bruised. The pole came near crashing into one side of a car and would no doubt have injured passengers.

The Ladies Delighted. The pleasant effects and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effective in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels.

Another Challenge. We, the victors in the late game of base ball, do hereby challenge the better makers of the Huber Manufacturing company to a friendly game, to be played on September 7th, and game to be called at 1:15 p.m. COMMITTEE.

Artistic Dress and Reform.

Mrs. James Miller, who lectures on correct and artistic dress, also edits a magazine entitled "Dress," the most instructive journal for women in the world. It teaches how to dress healthfully, correctly and artistically; how to dress according to individual needs; teaches the awkward how to be graceful, the ungainly how to be beautiful; instructs the unattractive in the art of pleasing. It teaches women to develop and enjoy their own possibilities of grace and beauty, improves physically and mentally, and contains knowledge found in no other journal, and which is precious to its readers.

Any of the ladies selling tickets for the lectures will take orders for the magazine. Subscription price is $2, with one dollar's worth of the James Miller system of artistic patterns, free for all who subscribe now.

Mrs. Miller will appear in many different and beautiful costumes at her lectures, which range in price from $25 to $500 each. This will afford our dressmakers an unusual opportunity, also the ladies who are in the habit of directing or doing their own sewing.

At City Hall Friday and Saturday nights, Friday night is for ladies only.

Big Four After Another Line.

A dispatch from Chicago says that President M. E. Ingalls and Vice President J. D. Laying of the Big Four, together with President John Newell of the Lake Shore road, are making a tour of inspection over the line of the Ohio, Indiana and Western with a view, it is said, of adding that road to the Big Four system, or at least operating it in the interest of that combination. A price has been set on the property, it is reported, which is considered by those best posted as very reasonable. The three officials named have been assigned to inspect the road, and if they report favorably on its condition the controlling interests in the property will probably, if the current report is correct, be bought at the price named. The road was formerly known as the Indiana, Bloomington and Western, and extends from Springfield, O., to Evans, Ill., a distance of 152 miles.

Recently the Streets.

The Columbus Press truly remarks: "There is nothing else that will contribute so much to the beauty of a street and can be secured at so small a cost as a grass plot between the curb and the sidewalk. There is no need of a wide roadway. It takes money to properly pave such roadway, and it is money thrown away when spent on a residence street. Cut down the width of the roadway on your streets as you improve them and you will cut down the expense of your improvements, secure space for a grass plot that will be beautiful and inexpensive and at the same time retain all that a wide avenue contributes to a beautiful vista. The width of streets is measured by the eye and not from the curbline to curbstone, as many suppose, but from fence to fence, or better yet, where fences are dispensed with, from house front to house front."

THE MYSTERY OF THE SUN.

What Is Sought to Be Disclosed in the Eclipse in December.

The number of astronomical parties that are preparing to go to convenient points in the track of the total solar eclipse in December, and the completeness of the equipments they propose to take with them for observation, make the prospects for good results unusually hopeful. The comparatively infrequent opportunities for studying this species of solar phenomena, and the brief time that is available under the most favorable circumstances for observation, make each event of great importance to astronomical science, particularly as at no other time can so much evidence be obtained for determining the real character of the sun and its appendages.

Long as the science of astronomy has flourished and great as has been its advance, it is only within a few years that, by the aid of the spectroscopic and photographic, the nature of the sun and its surroundings has been established with anything like certainty, and even now the most widely different theories are held as to the character of the sun's activity. It has long been known that around the black disk of the sun in total solar eclipses a halo of light is seen, bright next to the sun, but fading away more or less gradually into the blackness around it. This was supposed by the generally accepted astronomical view of 1870 to be due either to the effects produced by our own atmosphere or by the sun's atmosphere. It was not till later that astronomers were convinced that this halo or corona was a part of the sun itself, and that from it must be derived the most important clues for settling the mysteries of the sun's heat and light.

From the observations of eclipses made recently it is now well known that the sun as ordinarily visible to us, bounded by the photosphere, is only a part of the sun. Just outside the photosphere is a comparatively thin layer of gas, mainly hydrogen, called the chromosphere; around this is the corona, thousands of miles thick, and around the corona, especially along the equator, there is an considerable extension of matter about which little is known. The general theory which has been built up from a knowledge of these facts and from the observations of such phenomena as sun spots and prominences is that the chromosphere and corona are being continually tossed about in the enormous atmosphere of the sun and new matter is getting out of it. The outer layers of the atmosphere are recognized as much cooler than the inner. Cool or comparatively cool masses of matter are produced by condensation in the upper regions from the hot ascending vapors of the lower atmosphere. These masses of matter, having gathered weight, come under the influence of gravitation, over twenty-five times as great as ours, and fall with almost irresistible rapidity toward the center. It is supposed that these terrific rains of cooled matter upon the sun produce what are known as sun spots.

We know how small quantities in our own world are heated to incandescence by friction. Their kinetic energy is transformed into heat. It is not difficult to imagine, therefore, that these masses of matter, darting down from a great height above the photosphere of the sun, create great disturbances near the photosphere, such as sun spots indicate, and that these disturbances are the cause of the great magnetic storms which are so common. The matter is supposed to be thrown up like the water of a fountain and like it thrown back, only to be tossed up again, but on a grander scale, that the magnetic field is unable to form a picture of it.

If this is the correct theory of the sun's existence, it is impossible to conceive of any limit to it. Elements which we can only heat into a glowing mass are there heated to a vapor and by expansion thrown 10,000 miles or more away, only to be pulled back again toward the center of attraction, there to be thrown off again. But effective as the theory is in explaining solar phenomena, it is by no means generally held, and among those holding it there are great differences of opinion. The evidence is little better than circumstantial, and it is only by the industrious work of astronomers, with improved appliances, that the mystery can approach solution. The study of the sun is to us the most important study in astronomy. It affects us directly. To better understand this center of life and heat is to better understand our own surroundings, and it is from the observations of these sent out to view the occasional total eclipses of the sun that light must come.—Providence Journal

He Knew No English.

About one month ago a young man named Joe Harpster was struck on the back of the head with a pair of brass knuckles by a footpad, knocking him senseless, and for more than a month he lay unconscious. A few days ago he suddenly recovered his senses, but when he did he was able to converse intelligently only in the German language. He was born of American parents, who spoke German, and that was the language he first learned. He gave that up, however, and learned English, using it at all times, entirely forgetting his German. Now he can remember nothing of English. Scientists are wrestling with the problem.—St. Louis Republic.

A New York physician tried an experiment with Dr. Brown-Sequard's elixir upon a cat with perfect success. The doctor slipped the cat with half a pound of oil and then applied the elixir by the ordinary method. At a moment the cat was dragged at the room, the stupor of the cat having entirely disappeared.

Diamonds Are Up.

Diamond dealers in Maiden lane and John street are watching every movement of the market with sharp eyes. Their wares have been advancing steadily in value for four months past, and prices show no sign of any falling off.

"On the contrary," said a well known Maiden lane importer, who has just returned from Europe, "I found the London market very stiff and upbitten in tone. As is generally known, the output of the African diamond mines is controlled by what is known as the Amalgamation, which is a sort of diamond trust, and three London firms, Jules Porges, Bonato Brothers and Julius Kuhn, handle the greater portion of the uncut diamonds that come to that market. They have restricted the output to suit themselves, and as a consequence many of the Amsterdam cutters and polishers are running with reduced forces, while some of the smaller shops have closed up altogether."

"The market's firmness may be judged by an incident which occurred in London just before I sailed. I was in the office of a large diamond firm, trying to get some stones suitable for my trade, when an outsider, that is, a man not in the trade, came in and purchased a parcel of medium stones, weighing from one to three carats, and valued at $6,000 or $7,000, for which he paid cash down. He had the stones wrapped up, and put them back in the firm's safe to await a rise in the market. I also know of an American dealer who went over this spring to buy from $50,000 to $100,000 worth of stock who have returned with only half the stones they intended to purchase, and some came back with even less than half."

Diamonds are as a matter of fact, from 20 to 25 per cent, higher today than they were four months ago, when the market began to feel the manipulations of the diamond trust. The trust is evidently a success, and if diamonds keep on going up engaged couples may have to be content with other gems.—New York Sun.

Queer Things on Mount Lyell.

Thomas Albright, the well known Prescott prospector, informs The Index that "great sights have been seen" around Mount Lyell during the past two weeks. All through the present season it has been noticed that the glacial streams flowing from beneath the great ice field—which have been trickling in measured values for thousands of years—have increased so as to become respectable creeks in many instances. This could not be accounted for, as the heat of the sun is probably no more intense than it has been many times before.

Tossily the phenomenon may be explained by recent occurrences. Within the past month singular lights and glows have been noticed along the upper edge of the ice, the towering bare cones gleaming phosphorescently amid the gloom of night. Each morning following a display of this kind smoke is seen issuing from under the ice in intermittent streams, as if ejected by some force acting beneath. At times the white are sharp and sudden from a dozen or more places at the same time, accompanied by a red dust which settles on the glacier and discolors it in blotches of many acres. It is believed, as Mr. Albright says, that the mountain is "alive and working," and that the pent up forces within are struggling to make a vent. The glacier is about two miles in length and a mile in width. Its depth in places, judging from the profile of the mountain, which is 13,000 feet in height, must be enormous. Perhaps old Plato has resumed operations in his laboratory and is endeavoring to throw out the great mass of ice which plugs his chimney. Lyell has been dead to all appearances for countless ages—ever since the time, in the forgotten past, when, by some cataclysm, the whole continent was covered by an ice cap several thousand feet in thickness. Maybe the old bill is trying to reassert itself and demonstrate to the world that it still has latent life.—Homer Index.

Health in Tenements.

It has always been accepted that in cities the death rate in tenement houses is greater than the general death rate. This belief has recently been corroborated, as far as New York city is concerned, by a careful analysis of the returns made to the health department. It was found that last year the general death rate per 1,000 inhabitants was 26.35, while the death rate among tenement dwellers was 27.1. Beyond this it was found that the death rate in large tenement houses is less than in the smaller ones. The chief reason for this difference of mortality to the advantage of tenement houses is attributed to the exercise of the plenary power of the board of health in regard to them in both construction and appointments during recent years, while the construction and appointments of the hitherto supposed to be the most healthful class of houses have been left to the intelligence of the architects and tenants, excepting a general compliance only with the plumbing laws.—Boston Herald.

Discouraging the Whittling Habit.

In New Haven they are determined to discourage the practice of whittling public buildings. A prisoner in the lockup climbed up a ventilator shaft and cut away a number of slats, only to be nabbed by the vigilant watchman, brought before the magistrate he was fined $50 and costs for damaging the building, in addition to receiving the penalty for the misdeeds that brought him into the toils of the law.—Boston Transcript.

Seventy-three years ago Mrs. Sally R. Weeks Backman, then a blushing bride, went to housekeeping in a snug farmhouse on the west slope of Mount Prospect, N. H. The other day in this same house, where she has lived ever since, she celebrated her one hundredth birthday, and was strong enough to receive not only her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, but also a large number of her friends and acquaintances.
